Making real impact – What does it mean?

Impact is one of the most talked about subjects in research, with so many differing viewpoints of what it means and how you measure it. In a sector increasingly full of pressure and expectation, we recognise the challenges faced in connecting research to impact. We also believe as a publisher we have a responsibility to drive forward the belief that research should not just exist on the page, but come to life through real world change.

The industry has long relied on metrics such as citations as an indicator of relevance within academia. We are pleased to share the latest results for Impact Factors, CiteScore and other metrics for our journals. Our significant year on year improvement reflects the ever increasing quality and value of our content. However, Emerald also recognises that citations, as traditional markers of influence, do not tell the full story of research impact. That is why Emerald is committed to championing 'Real Impact' and working with our global author network to publish research which makes a difference and delivers positive change in the real world.

Visit emeraldpublishing.com to learn about what we are doing to support real world change, read our case studies and get a copy of our support tools designed to help improve impact literacy across the research sector.

Emerald Publishing has received its best ever Impact Factor results in the data release of 2017 JCR® from Clarivate Analytics compared to 2016 data

The JCR® provides a combination of impact and influence metrics from 2017 data, and millions of cited and citing journal data points that comprise the complete journal citation network sourced from the Web of Science. The Impact Factor published in the latest JCR® is calculated by the number of citations received in 2017 to articles published in that journal in the preceding two years (2015 and 2016).

Emerald titles continue to show strong CiteScore performance through the release of the 2017 CiteScore™

CiteScore™ metrics are comprehensive, transparent, current and free metrics for journals in Scopus. It works by calculating the number of citations received in 2017 to all items published in that journal in the preceding three years (2014, 2015 & 2016).
